St Peter's Square has rapidly become a hub for the city, drawing in diverse and forward-thinking businesses. The square's proximity to Manchester's universities has made it the go-to location for young, pioneering talent.

Its huge transformation has seen the expansion of the Metrolink, refurbishment of historical buildings, investment in the creation of new assets, and development of a modern public realm, all helping to create a world-class square. Landmark is the final piece of Manchester City Council's vision for the Civic Quarter.

BE CONNECTED

A mere 19-minute drive away, Manchester's airport is second in size only to London, with flights to over 225 destinations worldwide and 28 million passengers flying in and out every year. And with £1bn worth of investment being poured into its expansion, plans for the airport are sky-high.

When it comes to local travel, there are excellent connections to the capital with 72 trains daily getting you into London Euston in just over 2 hours. The arrival of HS2 will see this reduced to only 68 minutes. Similarly, as part of Network Rail's Great North Rail project, the Ordsall Chord bridge provides direct links across the UK rail network.

Metrolink Interchange St Peter's Square

Within Manchester itself, you'll find the country's largest light rail system, the Metrolink, which runs across the city centre and out to the suburbs – helping some of the 7 million people who commute into the city every day. By road, the city is extremely well connected, with a quarter of the nation's motorway network running through Greater Manchester. To put this into perspective, it means 20 million people in the UK are within a 2-hour drive from the city.

With a significant increase in people using bikes predicted, Manchester is prepared with a masterplan which will gain the city 1,000+ miles of quiet routes, with 75 miles of Dutch-style segregated bike lanes.

Vogue first established its website in 1996, pioneering itself for the digital future. Twenty years later, internet-based fashion sites have found their place along with the more daring of electronic images, all enhancing the magazine's traditional content.

Photographer's experience to Vogue shows no sign of diminishing, nor do dialogue with the key cultural figures of the time. Many of today's photographers retain an insider knowledge of Vogue's history while leaving their own interpretive space. It most significantly Marie Perle and Tim Walker. 'What Vogue did made sense to me,' Walker has observed, 'because it dealt with fantasy and the magical. As I studied to become I started really to understand photography.' Others, such as Raulo Mäkelä and Glen Luchford, provide a visual language of gesture and dance that goes more to the familiarity and experience of real life.

On its very first page, Vogue had promised 'really and truly, each arriving thing is going to happen to you that you would never believe there, unless you see them in Vogue.' As the magazine moves into its second century, the promise and the expectation remain undimmed.

CULTURAL DELIGHTS

As well as being the spiritual home of the "matchstick man" himself, The Lowry hosts art, music, comedy and more. Laugh, gawp, sing and be mesmerised, all under one impressive roof. Alternatively, immerse yourself in Manchester's legendary music scene – from gritty clubs like Band on the Wall to the beautiful Royal Exchange Theatre, Manchester Opera House and the Manchester Art Gallery just around the corner.

EVENING TIPPLES

Situated in the very heart of town, Sinclair's Oyster Bar is a striking mock-Tudor building complete with pub grub, rustic wooden beams, classic ales and a huge beer garden. We also recommend the Northern Quarter and Deansgate for food and evening drinks. With a new food and drink market called Society coming soon – located within a two-minute walk of Landmark – you'll find plenty of choice here.

AND INTO THE NIGHT

The Hotel Gotham, home to Club Brass, features a stylish decor which draws on the building's former use as a bank. Alternatively, put your favourite tunes on the jukebox and sip on a cocktail at Dusk til Pawn, a great speakeasy hidden behind a pawn-shop facade.
